Refugee Appeals Board Hearing

The Refugee Appeals Board makes the final decision in your asylum case. It means that the decision of the Refugee Appeals Board cannot be appealed to any other authority.

If your application for asylum is rejected by the Refugee Appeals Board, you are in phase 3 of the Danish asylum procedure and must leave Denmark. You may have a lot of questions, thoughts and concerns about your situation.

If you do not leave Denmark, the Danish Police will call you in for a meeting. During the meeting you must choose whether you want to cooperate with the Police about your deportation from Denmark. The Danish Police can help you get the necessary travel documentation and pay for your travel costs.

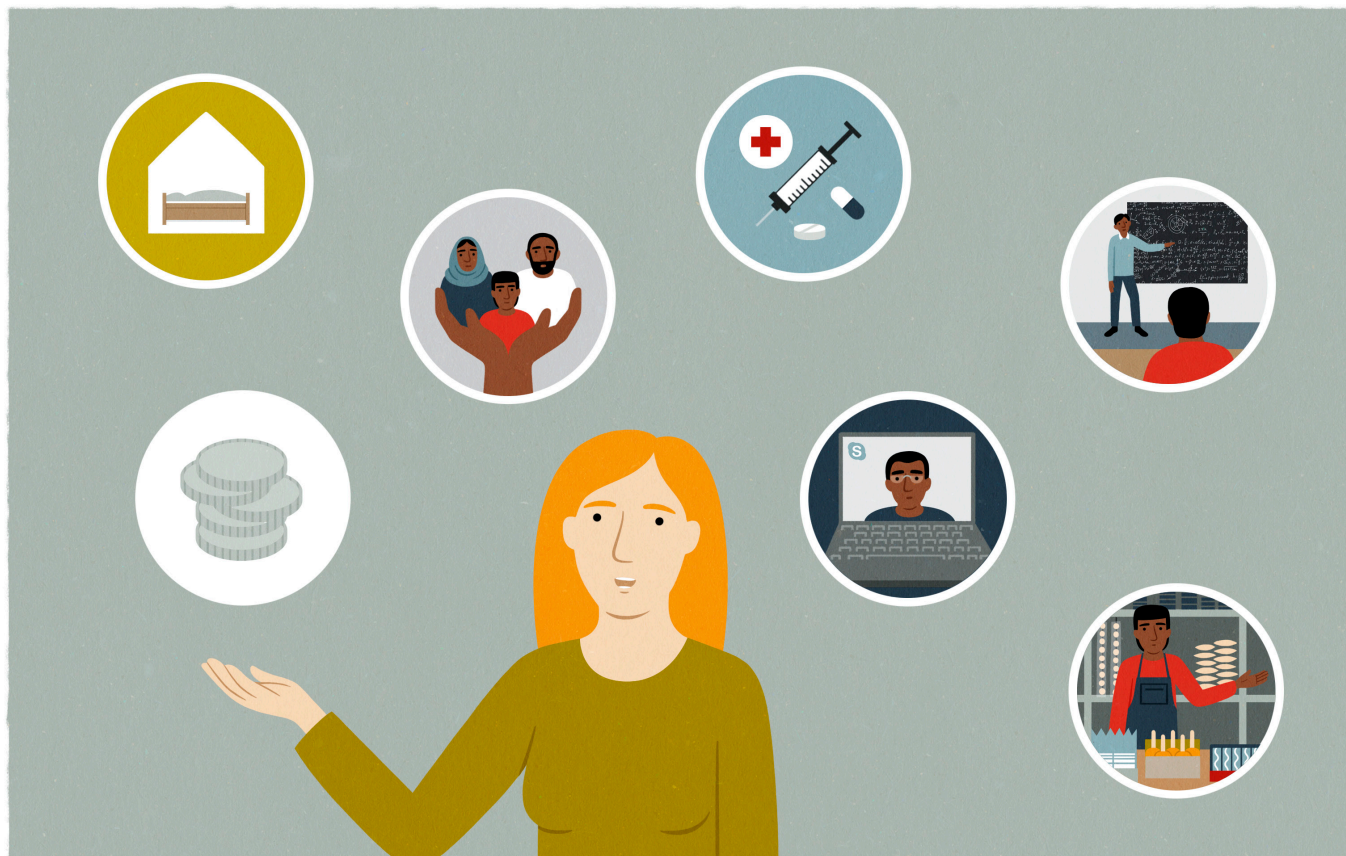

If you do not want to leave Denmark voluntarily, you risk detention and forced return to your home country.

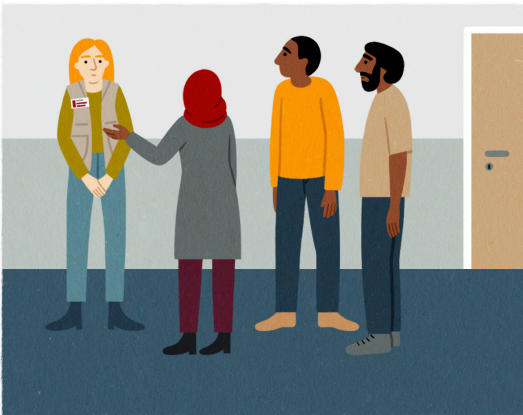

If your application for asylum is rejected, you will be moved to a departure center. All the residents in the departure center have to leave Denmark. You will not be able to cook your own food at the center. A cafeteria is available. The Danish Refugee Council has an office at the center.

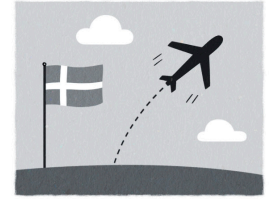

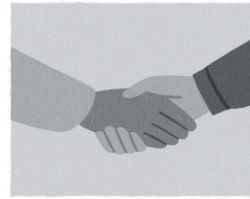

You are welcome to visit the Danish Refugee Council's office at the center. We would like to offer you counselling about returning to your home country. We can talk to you about your situation – about both practical and emotional issues.

We – the Danish Refugee Council – know about what kind of practical, social and/or financial support you may be able to receive, if you return to your home country.

You may have many thoughts about what you should do and what will happen to you. You may have concerns about what will happen should you return to your home country. For example: Will you be safe? Will you be reunited with family? Will you get a job? And so on.

You may have concerns about what will happen if you do not leave Denmark voluntarily. We – the Danish Refugee Council – know about what rules and procedures apply to you. You are always welcome to come and talk with us.
